

VISITS TURKEY IN RED CROSS RELIEF WORK

Miss Sabra C. Bradley, Well-known Here, Sees Mithridates' Castle and Tombs Hewn in Rocks.

LIVING CONDITIONS POOR

Houses of Best Families Are Infested With Insects—Plumbing Conditions Are Bad.

Miss Sabra Claire Bradley, niece of Mrs. W. S. Dorsey of Columbia, is doing Red Cross Relief work in Turkey and Armenia with the refugees and orphans. Her relatives received a letter from her recently which was written July 26, 1920. Before that no word had been received from her for so long that for a time it was feared that she was lost. She writes very interestingly of her life and experiences in Samoun, Turkey. Speaking of the house into which they had recently been ordered to move, she says:

"This house had a bath and plumbing. It also had bedbugs, but so have all the best families in Turkey; so we were right in with the 'four hundred.' (After a night of being 'in', it seems more like the 'four million'). The plumbing in this house did not work, so we engaged a plumber by the month. He came steadily for three months. On Mondays and Tuesdays he tore everything out. On Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays he put everything back again. He stopped at the end of three months because he died."

Speaking further of an excursion Miss Bradley and several of the hospital staff took, she writes:

"The first night we camped by a river under some trees and in the morning went swimming under a waterfall. By traveling slowly we reached Amassia by noon the next day. Amassia is famous because of Mithridates' castle and tombs. There are huge tombs hewn out of the solid rocks in the sides of the mountains. They were probably done by the Hittites 2000 B. C. and used by Mithridates, who lived much later, about 200 B. C. Mithridates' own tomb is there and that of his daughter. He probably had too many wives to have tombs for all of them. I'll try and include a picture so you can get some idea of how they were cut out of the rock."

Morris Harris, a cousin of Miss Bradley, is a student in the University. Miss Julia Sampson, librarian in Jay H. Neff Hall, is an aunt. Miss Sampson says that Miss Bradley is contemplating coming back to the United States soon unless she is prevailed upon to remain and teach in the Constantinople Girls' College.

MAY NOT PUBLISH SAVITAR?

Only 1,790 Copies Have Been Sold: Solicitors Do Poor Work.

The Savitar staff faces the serious situation of not being able to publish the 1921 edition of the student yearbook unless more books are sold within the next two months. Only 1,790 Savitars have been sold up to December 1, according to an official report given out at the Savitar office. This is several hundred copies less than an absolute minimum necessary for the publication of the book.

The minimum upon which the expense budget was based was 2,000 books, according to Francis Misselwitz, managing editor, and he declares that unless this number is reached that the Savitar cannot be made worthy of the University. "The only solution to this problem,"

Misselwitz said, "is to publish no book at all."

Members of the staff are disappointed with the work of the solicitors rather than with the student body as a whole. The necessary sale of the Savitars in previous years was accomplished largely by the work of the solicitors in support of the Queens. Following last year's campaign the solicitors decided that they did not want the Queen contests any longer but promised that they would help in the sales campaign as they had done previously without assurances of individual reward for their services. With a few exceptions, their promises have fallen flat, members of the Savitar staff declare.

The School of Medicine was first in the inter-department race with 53 books sold to a total of 60 students. The final standings of the various departments follow:

1. Medicine 147
2. Law 133
3. Education 114
4. Journalism 111
5. Agriculture 97
6. Engineering 91

8. Arts and Science 69
9. Graduate 45
Total sold 89
(including books sold outside of schools.)

The solicitors who placed first in the number of books sold, and who accordingly receive each a free copy of the Savitar are: Harriet Jaquin, Winifred Dyar, Leslie Allen, A. B. Elkins, Hugh Evans, Edwin Oschner, E. W. Schenk, Herman Barken, Edwin Vasse, Hugh Schuck, John Morris, V. L. Weber, Arlo Martin, Ruby Huette, A. C. Hill, W. L. Blendon, Florence Schaper.

Another campaign will be held in January, at which time at least 250 more Savitars must be sold.
